Mark Cheramie Walz and David F. Conn are both partners in the law firm of Sweet, Stevens, Katz & Williams, LLC—founded in 1995, the first private law practice in Pennsylvania dedicated entirely to education law.

Mark Cheramie Walz dedicates his work to the use of technology in education and advising practical solutions that reduce liability while harnessing the benefits of new technology. Additionally, Mark counsels school entities in all matters related to special education litigation, including due process hearings and federal court

David F. Conn is a seasoned litigator who, prior to joining the firm, represented public entities of almost every kind. David has been presenting on LGBT Issues in the school setting for many years, and for many different audiences, including lawyers, teachers, administrators and community groups. He is also the author of Doylestown Borough's non-discrimination ordinance, which Equality PA continues to use a model local ordinance.
